Challenges include limited staff time, staff turnover, and leadership changes. The annual cost for Category 2 departments is $8,400. The meeting also addressed the feasibility of choosing pathways over accreditation, noting limited data due to the newness of the pathways program. Dr. Schussman asked about return on investment for increased public trust and credibility that may come with accreditation. Groundwater Protection in Weber County:
The Importance of Aquifer Classification
06/23/2025

Background

The aquifer underlying Weber County is not currently protected for drinking water quality as part of an existing aquifer classification. The deep confined aquifer system in the east shore area of Weber County plays a vital role in sustaining water flow to the Great Salt Lake and the surrounding wetlands. Groundwater classification is a crucial management tool that can help protect these water resources from potential contamination. The WMHD Board of Health previously supported the Morgan Valley aquifer classification in 2007 and Upper Ogden Valley classification in 1997.

Findings

The aquifer system contains groundwater with generally low total-dissolved-solids (TDS) concentrations (typically less than 500 mg/L), indicating high water quality. Only a few localized areas exhibit elevated TDS levels that may contribute salts to the system.

Hydrogeologic data supports classification of the aquifers in this area as Class 1A (Pristine), Class II (Drinking Water) and the shallow unconfined aquifer in western Weber County as Class 1C – Ecologically Important Groundwater. Class 1C includes the shallow unconfined aquifer where sensitive wetland environments exist. Recognition of these water-quality classifications will support sustainable groundwater management to ensure long-term protection of Utah's vital water resources.

Protecting both the shallow and deep portions of this principal drinking water aquifer is essential for:

- Preserving critical water supplies for communities and agriculture,
- Preventing the spread of contaminants through the groundwater system, and
- Maintaining ecological balance in the Great Salt Lake wetlands.

Impact of Classification:

The classification process summarizes geohydrologic conditions of an aquifer based on existing (or newly collected) data. The water quality of the aquifer system is determined using several scientific data sources and designates beneficial use according to the classification scheme as recognized and defined by the Utah Water Quality Board Based on TDS (Administrative Rules for Groundwater Quality Protection R317-6, December 1, 2019," Section 317-6-4, Groundwater Class Protection Levels, Utah Administrative Code).

This is simply a baseline assessment of the water system and recognizes the water resource in its current state and does not place any standards or regulations in place. Classification is a planning tool for county and city agencies to facilitate making sound land-use management decisions that recognizes the value of the community's water resources.

Next Steps

- Present to Weber County Commission/Submission to DEQ Water Quality Division for review and approval to hold a public comment period.
- Presentation to the Utah Water Quality Board for approval

GROUNDWATER QUALITY CLASSIFICATION FOR THE BASIN-FILL AQUIFER, EAST SHORE AREA, WEBER COUNTY, UTAH

Prepared for FRIENDS of Great Salt Lake and Weber Morgan Health Department

INTRODUCTION

This is a petition on behalf of FRIENDS of Great Salt Lake, in partnership with the Weber-Morgan Health Department (WMHD) to formally classify the aquifer of Western Weber County. Study data is to be presented to the Utah Water Quality Board (Board) submitted by Janae Wallace and Diane Menuz (Utah Geological Survey) and Dr. Greg Carling (Brigham Young University) to classify groundwater quality in the east shore area, western Weber County, Utah, pursuant to Utah Administrative Code R317-6-5, Ground Water Classification for Aquifers. Maps of the area to be protected are provided in the accompanying plates.

Weber County has the third largest county population in Utah, estimated at 269,561 in 2022 (<https://www.census.gov/quickfacts/webercountyutah>). In 2022, Weber County residents made up 8% of Utah's total population of 3,380,800 (<https://www.census.gov/quickfacts/UT>). Based on projections made in 2015, the population of Weber County is expected to increase to 389,334 by 2065, an increase of 60% over the period 2015–2065 (Perlich et al., 2017).

The aquifer underlying Weber County is not currently protected for drinking water quality as part of an existing aquifer classification. The aquifers underlying Weber County contribute water to Great Salt Lake and perimeter freshwater wetlands, and thus groundwater discharge from these aquifers is important to the continued support of the lake's designated beneficial uses. We summarize hydrogeologic data to support efforts to petition the Board to classify the aquifers in this area as Class IA (Pristine), Class II (Drinking Water) for the principal aquifer. In addition, we petition to classify the shallow unconfined aquifer beneath Weber County as Class IC groundwater or Ecologically Important Groundwater. Areas lacking water quality data are deemed "Unclassified."

FACTUAL DATA

Sufficient information is available to classify groundwater quality in the deep, confined aquifer system, located in the east shore area of Weber County, Utah. Data required to formally petition the Board were obtained from previously published studies. The information required for classification is contained in maps submitted with this report.

In addition, the following previously released publications contain valuable information about the Weber County part of the east shore area of the Great Salt Lake aquifer systems.

GEOLOGIC SETTING

The study area is the northern part of the east shore area of Great Salt Lake in the metropolitan City of Ogden, Roy, and North Ogden portion of Weber County, Utah (Figure 1). The area is defined as the area extending from the Davis-Weber County boundary and north to the town of Willard in Box Elder County, and from the eastern shore of Great Salt Lake to the western margin of the Wasatch Range (Clark et al., 1990). The area considered for groundwater classification covers the Weber County portion of the east shore area. The description of the geologic setting includes information about the larger east shore area because it is a connected hydrologic system.

Elevation across the east shore area ranges from over 9000 feet (2743 m) in the Wasatch Range to about 4190 feet (1277 m) at the shore of Great Salt Lake. The Weber and Ogden Rivers in Weber County are the most significant streams in the east shore area, accounting for 90% of surface water flow (Clark et al., 1990). Weber County streams include Fourmile, Burch, Snow, Rattlesnake, Wheeler, Kays, and Mill Creeks, with dozens of other perennial, intermittent, and ephemeral streams that flow westward from the Wasatch Range into the east shore area (Clark et al., 1990).

The geology of the east shore area was described in the previous aquifer classification petition by Wallace et al. (2011) in Davis County. Here we provide a brief overview of the geology. Rocks in the Ogden area of the Wasatch Range include the Precambrian Farmington Canyon Complex metamorphic and igneous basement rocks overlain by Paleozoic metasedimentary and sedimentary rocks, Tertiary sedimentary rocks, and Quaternary surficial deposits (Hintze and Kowallis, 2009). The rocks have been deformed and fractured by late Mesozoic to early Cenozoic thrust faulting and Miocene to Quaternary normal faulting along the Wasatch fault (Hintze and Kowallis, 2009).

The east shore area of Great Salt Lake is a structural graben that started to develop during the Tertiary with basin and range normal faulting. The active Wasatch fault is at the base of the Wasatch Range, the eastern margin of the graben. The graben, or basin, has accumulated large amounts of sediment shed from the uplifting Wasatch Range. The basin fill consists mainly of the Salt Lake Formation, with a maximum thickness of 14,000 feet (4267 m) beneath Great Salt Lake (Hintze and Kowallis, 2009).

The graben is located within the hydrologically closed Bonneville basin, with water draining towards Great Salt Lake and leaving only by evapotranspiration. The basin has been internally drained for much of the past 15 million years, having lakes of various sizes during much of that time. Four major lake cycles occurred during the last 780,000 years (Oviatt et al., 1999). Lake Bonneville was the last major lake cycle in the basin, existing from 30 ka to 13 ka, with modern Great Salt Lake as a remnant of the larger lake (Oviatt, 2015). With a history of deep lake cycles interspersed with periods of small lakes or nonexistent lakes, the basin-fill deposits in the east shore area contain interfingering gravel, sand, silt, and clay deposited in lacustrine and fluvial environments (Sprinkel, 1993).

GROUNDWATER CONDITIONS

The groundwater system of the central east shore area was described in detail by Feth et al. (1966). Groundwater in the east shore area occurs under confined and unconfined conditions in the basin-fill sediments to depths of at least 3000 feet. The occurrence of groundwater within Weber County occurs in several subdistricts identified by Feth et al. (1966), including the Weber Delta, Ogden-Plain City, North Ogden, West Warren, and Little Mountain subdistricts (Figure 2). The Weber Delta subdistrict accounts for most of the total groundwater within the county and it is primarily within this subdistrict that the Delta and Sunset aquifers can be differentiated (Figure 3). The two primary aquifers within the central east shore area are the Delta aquifer, which is located about 500–700 feet below ground surface and is primarily 50–150 feet thick, and the Sunset aquifer, which is located about 200–400 feet below ground surface and is 50–250 feet thick (Figure 5). The deeper Delta aquifer is more productive with wells of large yield, whereas the shallower Sunset aquifer is less permeable with wells of small yield. There are no wells of significant yield within the Sunset aquifer. The water withdrawn from the Weber Delta subdistrict is suitable for most uses without treatment. The boundaries of the other subdistricts were drawn based on chemical quality of water (Figure 2).

The other subdistricts vary widely in groundwater production and quality. The Ogden-Plain City subdistrict has the largest variability in groundwater quality, with wells nearby one another yielding significantly chemically different waters. Some wells are suitable for domestic use, while another is wholly unsuited for agricultural or industrial use. No distinct aquifers have been identified within the Ogden-Plain City subdistrict, and well depths range from 50 to 900 feet deep. The North Ogden subdistrict has several wells that yield chemically suitable water for any use. Most wells have exceptionally high artesian heads; however, the wells have relatively small yields. The West Warren subdistrict is generally high in sodium bicarbonate and is thus not suited for agricultural use; however, it is suitable for culinary use. The Little Mountain subdistrict has very few wells, and the low quality of water has not encouraged further drilling, and thus no individual aquifers have been identified within this district.

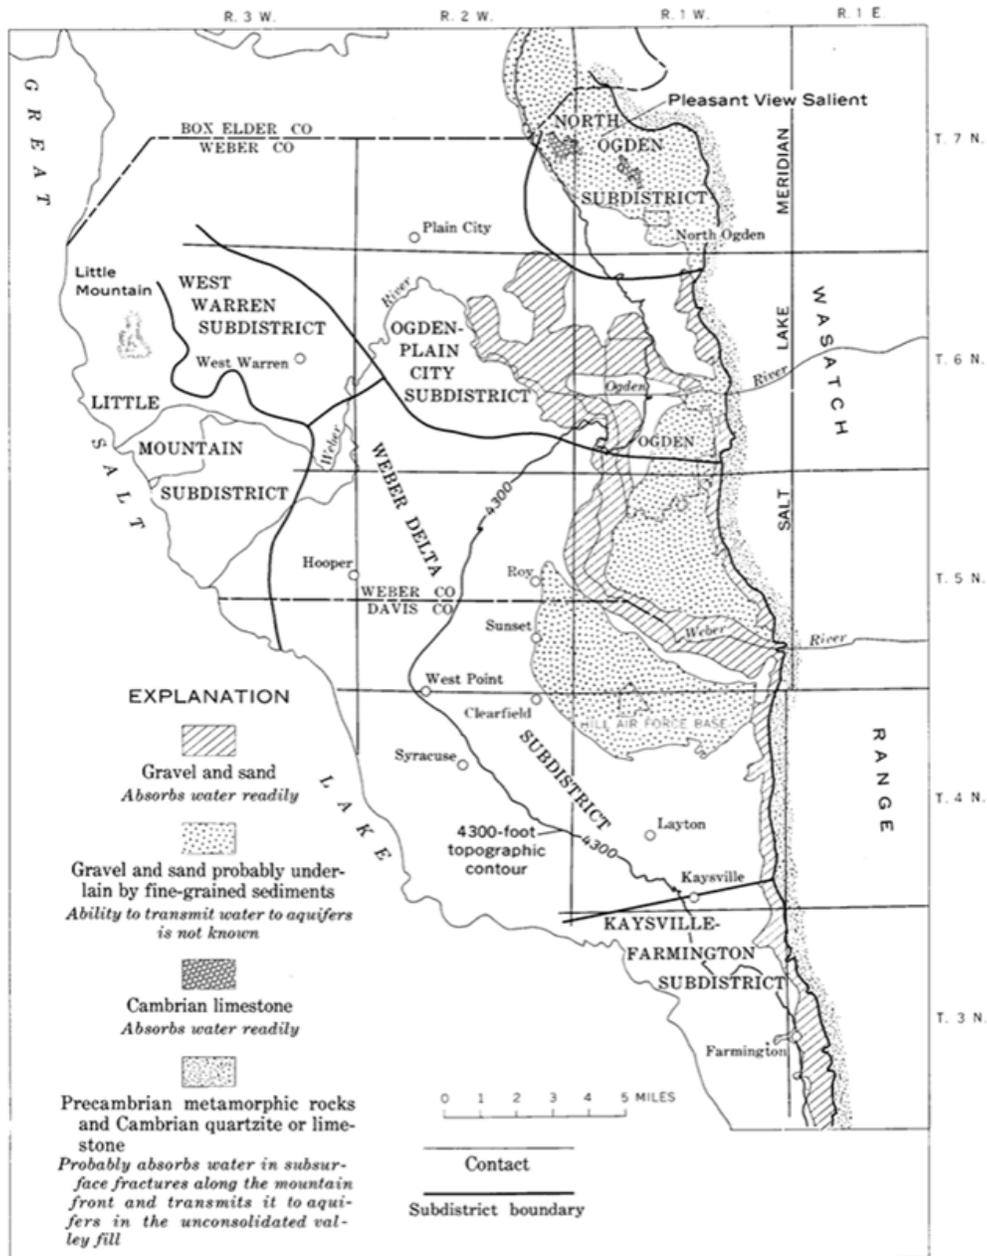

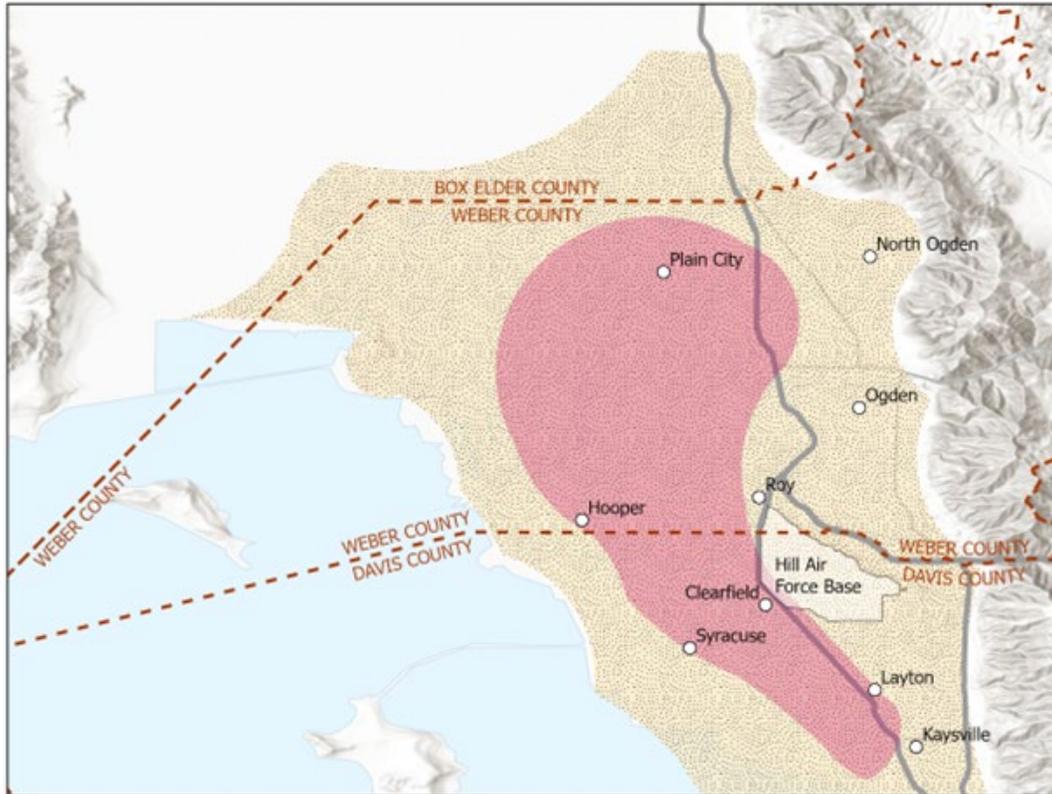

Figure 2. Aquifer subdistricts as delineated by Feth et al. (1966). All subdistricts, except for the Kaysville-Farmington subdistrict, were distinguished based on the chemical quality of the groundwater. The Kaysville-Farmington subdistrict is not addressed in this petition as it is outside of the area of interest.

The Weber Delta area was characterized by Clark et al. (1990). Groundwater flow direction is primarily from the mountain block and mountain front towards Great Salt Lake (Figure 4). The Weber Delta area is named due to the fan-shaped delta that was formed primarily by the Weber River flowing from the mouth of Weber Canyon. The Weber Delta area is contained within the east shore aquifer system. The east shore aquifer system was described by Clark et al. (1990) as the saturated sediments in the basin fill between the Wasatch Range and Great Salt Lake, including the Sunset and Delta Aquifers, but not including the shallow unconfined aquifers in the study area (Figures 3 and 5). The deep aquifer within the east shore is recharged primarily through precipitation in mountainous areas which then flows into the east shore area. Precipitation deposited within the Wasatch Mountain basins seeps into the aquifer system through natural stream and river channels, irrigation canals, irrigated fields, lawns and gardens, direct precipitation infiltration, and subsurface inflow from consolidated rock within the Wasatch Range. A conceptual model of groundwater flow in the east shore area (Figure 6) shows groundwater discharge from deep and shallow aquifers to Great Salt Lake and perimeter wetlands (Kirby et al., 2019). Discharge from the deep aquifer of the east shore area is primarily through well pumping, springs, and seepage to Great Salt Lake; however, with slight leaking between the deep and shallow aquifers, there is some additional discharge through evapotranspiration and streams. Groundwater drawn from the East Shore area is primarily pumped from the Weber Delta area.

Groundwater in the Weber Delta area occurs in unconsolidated basin-fill deposits under both water table (unconfined) and artesian (confined) conditions, but most of the water withdrawn by wells is from artesian aquifers and is used for public supply (Smith et al., 2019). The total estimated withdrawal from the Weber Delta area in 2021 was 39,884 acre-feet, which is about 11,000 acre-feet less than the average annual withdrawal for the period of 2007–2016 (Smith et al., 2019). Of the total withdrawal in 2017, 31,788 acre-feet were for public supply, 5939 acre-feet for irrigation, and 1056 acre-feet for industrial use (Smith et al., 2019). Water levels have generally declined since the mid-1960s in the Weber Delta area and similar trends have been reported in other parts of the east shore area (Smith et al., 2019, Carling and Wallace, 2023).

PREVIOUS STUDIES

Deep principal aquifers have been the primary concern of previous studies on the east shore area of Great Salt Lake. These studies are described in Wallace et al. (2011). A few studies have additionally focused on the shallow aquifer system; Yidana et al. (2010) investigated the connections between deep confined aquifers and shallow unconfined aquifers. Their study aimed to determine whether groundwater pumping from the principal aquifer caused a significant decrease in groundwater discharged from the deep aquifer to the shallow aquifer. In Salt Lake Valley, the shallow unconfined aquifer overlies confining beds above the principal aquifer system and provides water to approximately 58,000 acres of wetlands in groundwater discharge areas. Yidana et al. (2010) installed shallow monitoring wells in Salt Lake Valley wetlands on the fringe of Great Salt Lake to determine the hydraulic gradient and water quality conditions. Through a MODFLOW model, the study showed that development of the principal aquifer could dramatically decrease the amount of water that the wetlands receive. Carling et al. (2013) investigated the impacts of shallow groundwater discharge on water chemistry and ecology of wetlands on the east side of Great Salt Lake. Kirby et al. (2019) compiled existing groundwater chemistry data adjacent to Great Salt Lake. Their study focused primarily on deep groundwater and also included a comparison with chemistry of wetlands adjacent to the lake.

GROUNDWATER QUALITY FROM PREVIOUS STUDIES

Groundwater quality is generally good in the east shore aquifer system, with most previous work having been focused on the confined aquifers (Wallace et al., 2011). A recent comprehensive study investigated all available groundwater chemistry data adjacent to Great Salt Lake, including the east shore area (Kirby et al., 2019). The major ion water type for groundwater in the east shore area of Weber County is mainly sodium chloride waters with some calcium-bicarbonate and sodium-bicarbonate waters near the shore of Great Salt Lake (Figure 7). Total dissolved solids (TDS) concentrations are generally low (<500 mg/L) in confined aquifers of the east shore area (Figure 8), with notable exceptions in Weber County including Fremont Island (2500-5000 mg/L) and solar evaporation ponds (>50,000 mg/L). The map in Figure 8 shows samples from confined aquifers. In certain locations, the deep groundwater system may act as a source of water having TDS concentrations >500 mg/L to the shallow groundwater system. Limited data are available for TDS for unconfined aquifers in the East Shore area as shown with an interpolated map in Appendix A.

GROUNDWATER QUALITY CLASSIFICATION DATA

We examined total dissolved solids (TDS) data for the principal aquifer from 124 wells within or immediately adjacent to Weber County where we had information on both well depth and TDS concentrations (Plate 1). Twenty wells had TDS values above 500 mg/L, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) secondary standard maximum contaminant level (MCL) for drinking water. Contaminants that exceed secondary standards do not present a risk to human health but can have aesthetic effects such as taste and color. Six wells had TDS values over 2000 mg/L, the primary drinking water standard MCL for TDS for public supply wells in Utah. The maximum TDS value in this set of wells is 2860 mg/L.

We examined data on additional constituents in the principal aquifer from 62 U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) wells and compared values to both the Utah groundwater quality standards and federal primary and secondary drinking water standards (Appendix B). These wells did not include the wells farthest to the west, including three wells just south of the Zirconium Facility and seven wells adjacent to the Zirconium Facility. One site, located in Hooper, exceeded the state groundwater quality standard and the federal secondary standard for pH (6.5–8.5) with a pH value of 8.8. Concentrations of arsenic ranged from 2 to 42.5 $\mu\text{g/L}$. Arsenic in four samples exceeded the MCL for the federal primary standard, with values ranging from 12.5 to 42.5 $\mu\text{g/L}$, but were below the Utah Division of Drinking Water standard for groundwater listed in R317-6-2.1. While no other constituents exceeded state groundwater or federal primary drinking water standards, several constituents did exceed federal secondary standards. These wells having water analyzed for chemistry include aluminum in 1 well, chloride in 11 of 62 wells, iron in 11 of 62 wells, manganese in 17 of 29 wells, and sulfate in 1 of 62 wells.

We also examined TDS data for wells in the shallow aquifer, defined as wells less than 200 feet deep and outside the primary recharge zone (Plate 3). These wells include seven associated with the Western Zirconium facility on the western edge of the county and 24 in a cluster between the Weber River and the north end of Hill Air Force Base. Eleven wells had values less than 500 mg/L, 30 with values between 500 and 3000 mg/L (all but one of these with values <2000 mg/L), and 5 with values greater than 3000 mg/L. These latter sites with high TDS values were all associated with the Zirconium Facility. TDS values in shallow wells at the Zirconium Facility ranged in TDS from 644 mg/L to 39,656 mg/L. We interpolated TDS values for the shallow aquifer using Empirical Bayesian Kriging. The resulting map (Plate 3) shows lower TDS values on the eastern half of the study area (in the range of 500 to 3000 mg/L) and higher values to the west. However, these data must be considered as tentative due to the paucity of data and sole reliance on data from the Zirconium Facility on the western edge of the interpolation area.

PROPOSED CLASSIFICATION

Under “Administrative Rules for groundwater Quality Protection R317-6, December 1, 2019,” Section 317-6-3, groundwater Classes, Utah Administrative Code, Utah’s groundwater quality classes are based on TDS concentrations as shown in Table 1. Two other classes, IB and IC, are not based on groundwater chemistry. Class IB groundwater, called Irreplaceable Groundwater, is a source of water for a community public drinking-water system for which no reliable supply of comparable quality and quantity is available because of economic or institutional constraints; this class has not been considered as part of this petition. Class IC groundwater, called Ecologically Important Groundwater, is a source of groundwater discharge important to the continued existence of wildlife habitat. Groundwater protection levels for classes IA and IB, as set under “Administrative Rules for groundwater Quality Protection R317-6, December 1, 2019,” Section 317-6-4, groundwater Class Protection Levels, Utah Administrative Code, are more stringent than for other groundwater quality classes.

| Groundwater Quality Class | TDS Concentration | Beneficial Use |
|---|-----------------------------------|---|
| Class IA/IB ¹ /IC ² | less than 500 mg/L ³ | Pristine/Irreplaceable/ Ecologically Important |
| Class II | 500 to less than 3,000 mg/L | Drinking Water ⁴ |
| Class III | 3,000 to less than 10,000 mg/L | Limited Use ⁵ |
| Class IV | 10,000 mg/L and greater | Saline ⁶ |

²Ecologically Important ground water (Class IC) is a source of groundwater discharge important to the continued existence of wildlife habitat; it is a groundwater quality class that is not based on TDS.

³For concentrations less than 7000 mg/L, mg/L is about equal to parts per million (ppm).

⁴Water having TDS concentrations in the upper range of this class must generally undergo some treatment before being used as drinking water.

⁵Generally used for industrial purposes.

⁶May have economic value as brine.

Principal Aquifer

FRIENDS and WMHD are petitioning the Utah Water Quality Board to classify the principal valley-fill aquifer in western Weber County as shown on Plate 2. The classification is based on data from groundwater from 124 wells, including 7 from the UDDW PSW data, 16 from the Utah Department of Agriculture and Food (UDAF), and 101 from the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) Utah Water Science Center. Of these wells, 3, 8, and 73 of the wells from UDDW, UDAF, and USGS, respectively, were located within Weber County and the remaining were adjacent to the county. We selected all wells in the primary recharge zone, wells at least 100 feet deep in the vicinity of the Zirconium Facility where the principal aquifer is shallower, and wells 200 feet or greater in depth in other areas to represent the principal aquifer. TDS values were interpolated using Empirical Bayesian Kriging across the extent of the area where data were available (Plate 1). The pattern generally agrees with the TDS contour lines from Plate 1 in Anderson et al. (1994). The classes (Plate 2) are described below.

Class IA- Pristine Groundwater: For this class, TDS concentrations in the study area range from 87 to 494 mg/L. This area represents 51.1% of the basin-fill aquifer.

Class II - Drinking Water Quality Groundwater: For this class, TDS concentrations ranged from 509 to 2860 mg/L. Areas shown on this map roughly coincide with TDS concentrations mapped by Anderson et al. (1994). This area represents 35.9% of the basin-fill aquifer.

Class IC- Ecologically Important Groundwater: This petition seeks to classify the westernmost portion of the principal aquifer as Class 1C. Insufficient water quality data exists to allow us to extrapolate TDS values beyond the edge of our interpolation (Plate 1). However, wetland areas adjacent to Great Salt Lake and its environs warrant protection, as discussed in more detail below, in the section on the proposed shallow aquifer classification. This area represents 5.5% of the basin-fill aquifer.

Unclassified: Four areas in the study area, representing 7.5% of the basin-fill aquifer, are considered unclassified – two associated with Superfund sites and two with other industrial facilities. Both Ogden Defense Depot and Hill Air Force Base are Superfund sites that have plumes of contaminated groundwater due to their history of solid and liquid waste storage and disposal. Ogden Defense Depot’s remediation actions have been completed and much of the area has been redeveloped, though groundwater treatment and monitoring are ongoing. Remediation has been completed in some but not all of the operable units within Hill Air Force Base. Wastewater ponds from the Western Zirconium facility have also been left unclassified. Shallow groundwater adjacent to these ponds have elevated concentrations of ammonium, radium, and other contaminants and a subsurface barrier wall has been erected to minimize additional discharge. Evaporation ponds for Compass Minerals have also been left unclassified. The unclassified portion of the aquifer is about 7.5% of the basin fill.

Shallow Aquifer

Class IC- Ecologically Important Groundwater: Wetland areas adjacent to Great Salt Lake and its environs warrant protection. This petition seeks to classify the shallow unconfined aquifer in western Weber County. Class IC groundwater is considered ecologically important and is a source of groundwater discharge that is important to the continued survival of an existing wildlife habitat. Limits on increases of TDS and organic and inorganic compounds are determined to meet applicable surface water standards (<https://deq.utah.gov/water-quality/classes-utah-ground-water-quality-protection-program>).

WMHD and FRIENDS of Great Salt Lake are petitioning the Utah Water Quality Board to classify the shallow, unconfined aquifer in western Weber County as Class IC, Ecologically Important Groundwater. Specifically, the area includes the shallow aquifer overlying the primary recharge, secondary recharge, and discharge zones as mapped by Anderson et al. (1994) and shown in Figure 9. The overlying unconfined aquifers have no protection currently; we define the shallow, unconfined aquifer as groundwater at a maximum of 100 (western margin of study area) to 200 feet below ground surface (eastern recharge area), residing above a confining layer of variable depth. The shallow groundwater system overlies the deep aquifer system with a similar footprint as the deep confined aquifers (compare Plate 2 and Figure 9). For example, in the Weber Delta area, the shallow groundwater system resides above the Sunset Aquifer and ranges from approximately 300 feet deep at Hill Air Force Base to 100 feet deep at the edge of Great Salt Lake (Figures 4 and 8). In the primary recharge zones nearest the Wasatch Range (Figure 9), the shallow unconfined aquifer is effectively connected to the deeper aquifers so the distinction between the shallow and deep aquifers is less defined. In the primary recharge zones, we define the shallow aquifer as the top 100 feet of water-saturated sediment. In areas where the confined Sunset Aquifer exists at depths less than 300 feet below the ground surface, we seek protection for the overlying shallow unconfined aquifer.

The shallow unconfined and deep confined aquifers are directly connected to the wetlands on the east side of Great Salt Lake. Great Salt Lake has the highest concentration of wetlands found anywhere in Utah, with hundreds of thousands of acres of playas, marshes, meadows, and duck ponds found along the shores of the lake. The great diversity of wetland types located close to one another helps the Great Salt Lake ecosystem support millions of migrating and nesting birds each year. Ogden Bay in Weber County is listed as an Important Bird Area of Global Significance by the National Audubon Society. The State manages the Ogden Bay Waterfowl Management Area (WMA), which not only supports wildlife habitat, but also recreational opportunities for hunters, bird watchers, and other outdoor enthusiasts. Groundwater is an important contributor to habitat at the WMA. The State has at least 21 water rights for wells and drains that are used to supply water for the wetland impoundments and adjacent uplands. Most of these wells have depths of around 80 feet, though at least one has a depth of 304 feet. Water in the confined shallow aquifer contributes to groundwater upwelling in freshwater wetlands and seeps in the lakebed of Great Salt Lake (Yidana et al., 2010).

Protecting the shallow unconfined aquifers also provides further protection for the deep principal water-supply aquifers in the east shore area where the confining layer that separates the two aquifers is thin or absent and/or where vertical hydraulic gradients are not strongly upward.

In nearby Davis County, a petition to classify the principal drinking-water aquifer there noted that “this classification does not apply to the shallow unconfined aquifer, which overlies the principal aquifer in much of the study area. This is technically justified by the presence of low-permeability confining layers between the shallow unconfined and deep aquifers, which act as an aquitard to protect the deep aquifer from surface contamination, and the upward vertical hydraulic gradient in ground-water discharge areas underlying much of the area where a shallow unconfined aquifer exists” (Wallace et al., 2011). This statement similarly describes the footprint of the shallow unconfined aquifer as overlying the principal aquifer and that groundwater in the western Weber aquifer, including having a generally upward gradient, where groundwater contributes to surface water wetlands, streams, and Great Salt Lake.

Unclassified: Areas associated with Ogden Defense Depot, Hill Air Force Base, Compass Minerals, and the Zirconium Facility have been left unclassified.

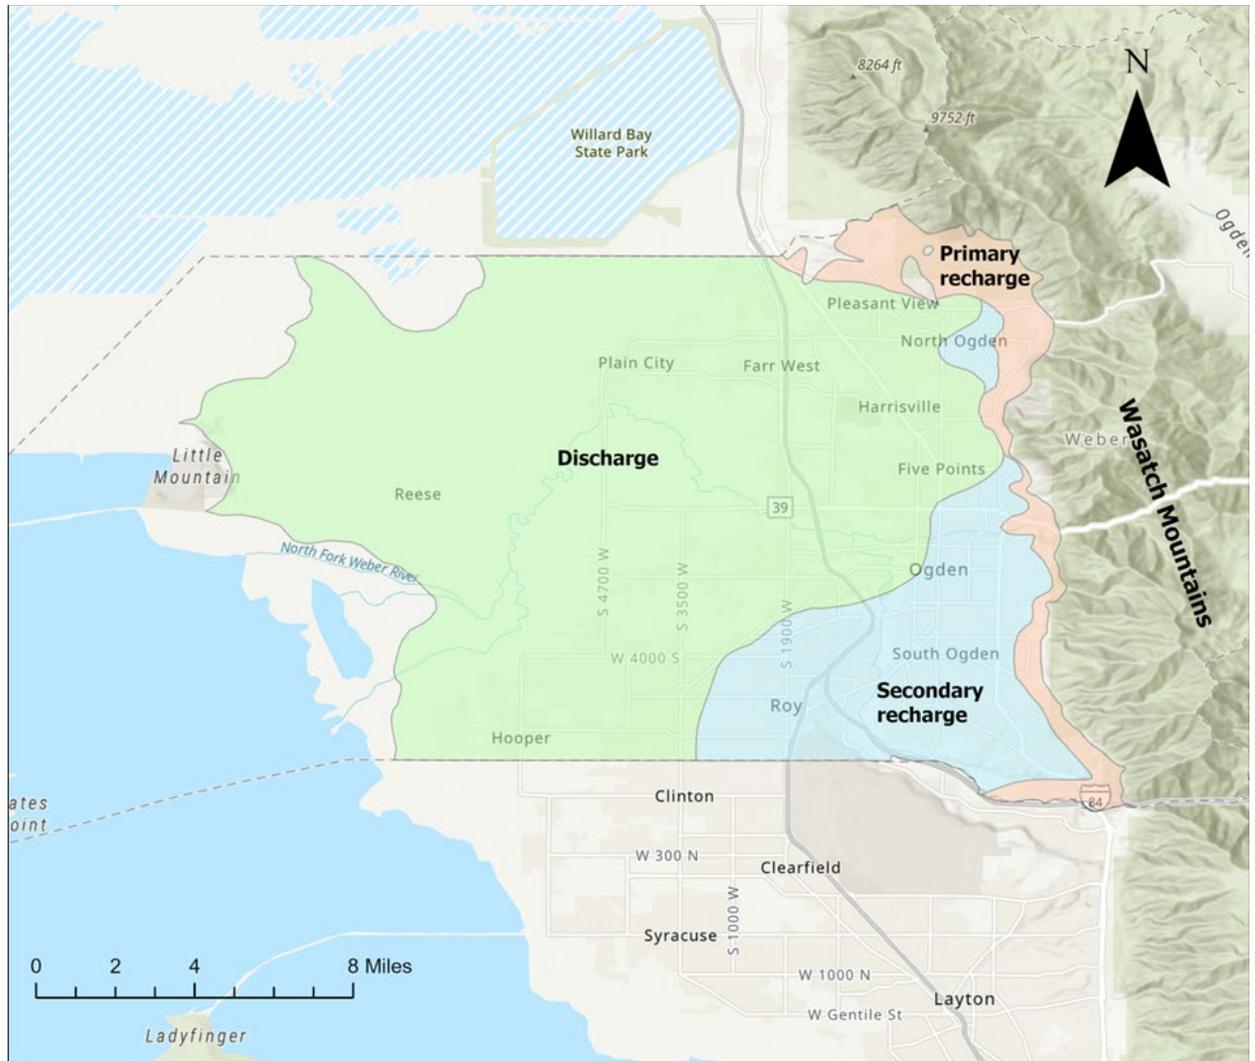

Figure 9. Map of primary recharge, secondary recharge, and discharge zones in the principal aquifer underlying the east shore of Weber County. The deep aquifer within these zones is the area that will be protected as part of the current petition. The recharge and discharge zones were mapped by Anderson et al. (1994).

CURRENT BENEFICIAL USES

In Weber County, groundwater from the aquifer is an important source of domestic and municipal culinary water for people living in the valley. Most water use for the east-shore area of Weber County as summarized by the 2022 municipal water users for Weber County, is from wells (52.1%), followed by streams (24.94%), other (18.08%), lakes and reservoirs (2.07%), and springs (1.29%) (Utah Division of Water Rights, 2022). Estimated well water withdrawal in 2022 for the east-shore part of Weber County was 51,033 acre-feet. East-shore Weber County domestic use in 2022 was approximately 61%, commercial use was 20.8%, industrial use was 12.4%, and institutional use was 5.4% (Utah Division of Water Rights, 2022).

WATER SUPPLY WELLS

There are 1112 approved wells in the Weber County area of the east shore aquifer system based on the Utah Division of Water records from 2022. The locations of the wells are shown in Figure 10.

POTENTIAL CONTAMINANT SOURCES

We mapped a total of 1585 potential contaminant sources for the East Shore area of Weber County (Figs. 11 and 12) using multiple data sources. The full list of sites is provided in Appendix C. The main data source was the Utah Department of Environmental Quality, Division of Environmental Response and Remediation (DERR) (<https://enviro.deq.utah.gov/>), which provided 959 sites. The DERR dataset included 521 petroleum storage tanks, 172 Tier 2 sites, 96 hazardous waste and used oil sites, 63 dry cleaners, 29 site remediations, 23 solid waste facilities, 21 toxic release inventories, 11 voluntary program sites, 11 UPDES discharger sites, 5 enforceable written assurance sites, 2 formerly used defense sites, 2 National Priorities List sites, 2 Brownfields non-targeted sites, and 1 Brownfields site.

An additional 225 potential contaminant sources were obtained from Drinking Water Source Protection Plans (DWSP). We requested a total of 51 DWSP documents associated with the areas of interest (Figure 13). We analyzed these documents for potential contaminant sources that were not included in the DERR database. The search yielded 164 single-family agriculture sites, 15 septic tanks, and 46 miscellaneous business and government sites.

To complete the list of potential contaminant sources, a Google Earth survey was performed to yield 401 additional sites. These included 169 churches (large lawns), 66 gas stations, 52 schools, 47 ballparks, 16 junkyards, 15 cemeteries, 12 greenhouses/nurseries, 9 golf courses, 7 government facilities, 5 mines, and 3 wastewater treatment plants.

In addition to the potential contaminant sources described above, WMHD provided locations of 4444 septic/onsite wastewater treatment systems (OWTS) in Weber County (Summer Day, written communication, March 2025) (Figure 13). The map of septic/OWTS was created using three processes. The first was a geocode of all systems during 2022-2023. The second method used taxing entity information to remove all properties that pay taxes to a sanitary sewer district, then the primary use information for the assessor office to determine if remaining parcels were residence, business, or undeveloped. The third method used a dataset of all alternative systems and large underground wastewater disposal systems (LUWDS) or community systems. These datasets were combined into an ARCGIS point file, any duplicates were removed. The dataset may overestimate the OWTS count in Weber County because some systems in the geocode dataset are now in the service area of a sanitary sewer district. However, this is the most accurate dataset available. The full list of OWTS is provided in Appendix D.

EXISTING POLLUTION SOURCES

Existing pollution sources include contaminants that have been documented and/or are currently being treated. As described in Wallace et al. (2011), known sources of pollution exist in the western Weber County part of the aquifer system. In northern Davis County/southern Weber County, groundwater contamination plumes with concentrations of organic solvents such as tetrachloroethylene (PCE) and trichloroethylene (TCE) exceeding drinking water quality standards (EPA, 2022) have been identified in the shallow unconfined aquifer in and around Hill Air Force Base with ongoing remediation (Dalpiaz et al., 1989; EA-Engineering, 2015). The Ogden Defense Depot, located in the northwestern portion of the city of Ogden, has a history of soil and groundwater contamination, though the site has been redeveloped following remediation. However, plumes of elevated vinyl chloride in the groundwater continue to be monitored (U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 2022). Shallow groundwater around the Western Zirconium facility in western Weber County is also regularly monitored due to elevated concentrations of ammonium, radium, and other contaminants (Utah Department of Environmental Quality, 2024).

GROUNDWATER FLOW DIRECTION

Groundwater flow in the study area is generally westward from the Wasatch Range towards Great Salt Lake (Clark et al., 1990), as shown on Plate 1. The groundwater flow within the Weber Delta area generally follows the Weber River's flow path from the mouth of Weber Canyon.

CONCLUSIONS

The deep aquifer system in the east shore area of Weber County provides critical water flow to the Great Salt Lake and adjacent wetlands. Groundwater classification is a tool that may be used to manage potential groundwater contamination sources and protect the quality of groundwater resources in Utah, in particular, Weber County. The deep confined aquifer in the Weber Delta area contains groundwater with generally low total-dissolved-solids (TDS) concentrations (<500 mg/L); further, the east shore area within Weber County also has low TDS concentrations, with only a few isolated areas having elevated TDS concentrations (>500 mg/L) that may contribute salts to the groundwater supply. Protecting the deep confined aquifer within the east shore and Weber Delta areas will protect the local habitat, preserve essential water resources, and help protect against contaminant transport. Classifying the basin-fill aquifer of western Weber County as Class 1C, Ecologically Important Groundwater, provides the tools for protecting both the shallow and deep principal drinking water aquifer.
